Possibly! Please check out the scenarios below, and get in touch with us if you have any questions.

1. If you change academic institutions, you are welcome to sign up for a brand new account with your new email address.
2. If you move from an academic institution to an industry company that has access to the platform, please sign up using your new institutional email address. This will ensure that you have access to the features your company has licensed.
3. If you move from an academic institution to an industry company that DOES NOT have access to the platform, we trust that users will not continue to use their free academic accounts. We strive to keep access to our antibody data free for academic/non-profit scientists only. Feel free to reach out to us if you have questions about access.
